Press Release - for immediate release - 02/06/2014

Webanywhere to move Headquarters to Leeds City Centre

Established in 2003, Webanywhere provides businesses and the education sector with learning management systems, e-portfolios and other e-learning tools, alongside curricular content. Now in its 10th year of trading, Webanywhere is moving to a new head office in the centre of Leeds.

Over the last few years the business has internationalised, with an increasing focus in North America and mainland Europe, including satellite offices in Philadelphia, USA and Katowice, Poland.

The new HQ is in the City Exchange development, part of the Trinity shopping and business complex, and Webanywhere will complete the move by the beginning of August 2014.

"As one of the leading digital and creative brands in the City region, the move to Leeds will bring us closer to many of our corporate clients, and gives us better transport links to London, and abroad." commented Sean Gilligan, founder and CEO of Webanywhere.

"As part of the move, we're looking to grow our team, with vacancies in technical support, marketing and sales. It's the start of a new decade for Webanywhere, and I look forward to taking the business to the next level."
